Remove an infection.Q: Kotlin coroutine scope - how to share global variables and methods between different threads? I'm working on an Android app and developing in Kotlin. Currently I have a button that invokes a function and sends a message to a broadcast receiver: private lateinit var button: Button private fun startReceiverTest() { button.setOnClickListener { launch(UI) { sendMessageToBroadcastReceiver() finish() } } } private suspend fun sendMessageToBroadcastReceiver() { val intent = Intent("MyBroadcastReceiver") intent.putExtra("key1", "1") intent.putExtra("key2", "2") broadcastReceiver.sendBroadcast(intent) } This works fine, but the function sendMessageToBroadcastReceiver() is not executed on the UI thread and this is causing problems as the app crashes if any code is outside of the scope of the main thread. I want to modify the code so that the message is sent asynchronously to the broadcast receiver. I've written this code: suspend fun sendMessageToBroadcastReceiver() { val intent = Intent("MyBroadcastReceiver") intent.putExtra("key1", "1") intent.putExtra("key2", "2") broadcastReceiver.sendBroadcast(intent f678ea9f9e
